

Third fragment of R. Locke's journal

20th October.

Okay, I knew this would come to light eventually. I just didn't expect it to hit me so hard. And that I will feel this bad about it. Yesterday I couldn't sleep, even though I went to bed early. I couldn't calm down my thoughts. I feel like I'm never going to calm them down again.

Is this really that big of a sin to want to keep my matters to myself? Yes, Alex did storm into my life, with her contagious laugh and witty retorts to everything, but that doesn't give her the right to get involved. How someone like her could understand someone like me? We are from two different countries, we have different values, we had completely different things happen to us in life. I can like Alex, but that doesn't mean she will ever truly get me. More than that, sometimes I feel like no one can go through what I went through and keep a positive outlook. Did I want to admit that demons drove my family to ruin? That I had to grow up quicker than any child should? That if Alex really got to know me, she would change her opinion about who I am? That she would no longer like me the way I am?

She wouldn't understand. I don't have to ask her to know she wouldn't. Alex desires knowledge, but above all, she is a good person, and she faces demons for the good of humanity. Who am I compared to her? I couldn't admit to my desire for revenge, nor that I only want the Book so I can murder demons like they murdered my family. Alex would cease the search if she learned that the Book latches on to their finder like a parasite, sucking the life out of them day after day. That I wanted to sacrifice myself in the name of revenge? I HAVE THE RIGHT TO DO IT! And I never wanted Alex to even touch the book. I just wanted her to help me find it, and get destroying another demon out of it.

Who would have thought she'd become so attached?!

Now everything got more complicated. We both touched the Book, so we both have to face the consequences. The Book is sucking the life out of me, and I was prepared for it. I can accept my own death in the name of revenge. But Alex? This shouldn't involve Alex. And although I'm furious, I do understand her anger at me, too. After all, she feels cheated. Not only she got into big trouble because of the Book, but I also hid the threat from her (she wouldn't let me take the risk otherwise!) and now she suffers because of my foolishness. I wouldn't care as much if it was anyone else, but I started to care about this stupid hunter. I just didn't think she cared about me too...
I think we need to talk.

Your task:

- * You have 30 minutes to complete this task.
- * Choose a distinctive place where Alex and Robin had their fight. It should be a different place from the ones you have used in videos and pictures so far.
- * Rebuild the memory. Reenact the scene of Alex and Robin's fight, leading it so it can end in a consensus and forgiveness. Why did they forgive one another? What emotions were involved? Record the scene on video.

After completing the task, post the video in your team's Facebook thread. Then go back to the checkpoint to receive your Third Key and the next fragment of R. Locke's journal.

Fourth fragment of R. Locke's journal

22nd October.

We had a fight, but afterward - surprisingly - I feel better. I feel lighter. Alex is smarter than me and although she's still upset with me, she said she understands. And I don't just "KNOW" she says that, I can also feel it's true. I've never met someone like Alex and although our meetings caused a big risk from the Book, I don't regret meeting her, or that we are so close.

Alex suggested we rebuild our trust. I have no idea what it means and it unsettles me since it sounds like some crazy idea, but I don't have a right to express doubts, considering it was me who messed up. She told me to take something I can use as a blindfold, and I already know I don't really like this concept and that I would never let anyone do this but Alex.

I still feel guilty because of the Book, and the fact it devours her life day after day...

Your task:

- * You have 30 minutes to complete this task.
- * Create and carry a trust exercise in your team. It should entail following a designated route, where each of you will be blindfolded, one at a time, and the rest will lead them just by conversation. It's not allowed to lead by touch. Make an audio recording from this exercise, so it can serve as a fragment of Alex and Robin's recreated memories.

After completing the task, post the audio recording in your team's Facebook thread. Then go back to the checkpoint to receive your Fourth Key and the next fragment of R. Locke's journal.